PROSECUTE US AND WE'LL TELL ALL, WARN COMMUNISTS

Ultimatum Conveyed To Certain Federal Officials, Says Report

THREATEN EXPOSURE

Idea Is To Block The Efforts Of The Dies Committee

By James L. Kilgallen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Mar. 21—“Prosecute us—and we'll tell all.” This ultimatum, it was stated today by a glib-tongued authority, has been conveyed to certain Federal officials by leading Russian Communists who, allegedly, have been “boring from within” and obtaining valuable information in governmental circles in Washington.

The Communists' threat to government officials that “we'll expose you if you prosecute us” is said to be blocking efforts of the Dies Congressional Committee to bring into the open “the full story” of the activities of Nicholas Dozenberg, alias Dallant, who is reputed to be the chief Red spy in this country.

Cargo Liner Sinking

Baltimore, Md., Mar. 21—The 27,000-ton cargo liner Panamanian, owned by Arnold Bernstein, Jewish shipping magnate, who was put in prison for two years by Adolf Hitler, while all his vessels were confiscated, is sinking in Baltimore harbor.

The ship, believed to be the largest cargo vessel in the world, began shipping water through a mysterious hole in her hull this morning. By the time the Panamanian was discovered to be sinking, the engine room was partly flooded, making impossible her scheduled departure tonight with a 15,000-ton cargo for the British Isles.

Reports of sabotage immediately swept the waterfront, while city and harbor police and firemen sought to discover the origin of the hole in the hull.

Fire Chief Howard Travers sped to the Locust Point dock where the Panamanian was loading, and after a quick survey announced that the ship was going down at the rate of about a foot an hour.

Bernstein, after losing his steamships and paying a fine of $400,000—in addition, his friends paid $30,000 to the Hitler government to obtain his release—came to the United States straight from a Nazi prison camp last September.

“Queen Mary,” “Mauretania” Have Put Out To Sea

NEW YORK, Mar. 21—(INS)—Shrouded battleship gray, Great Britain's Queen Mary today followed her smaller sister ship Mauretania out to sea on a hazardous secret war-time journey.

The 51,000-ton vessel moved down the Hudson River 12 hours after the Mauretania, heavily armed and painted a dull gray, left its pier. It was reported the latter luxury ship, which made its maiden voyage only last Spring, was lying off Sandy Hook, waiting for the Queen Mary.

The 35,000-ton Mauretania cut her mooring lines at 8 p. m. last night and put out to sea in a driving rainstorm. She was blacked out save for her essential running lights and moved down the Hudson River like a wraith.

It was believed both the Queen Mary and the Mauretania were under sealed orders that would be opened only when they were safely at sea. Waterfront rumor was that the boats were destined to carry troops from Australia to the Near East or from Canada to the Western Front.

Both ships were stripped of their luxurious trappings that once thrilled trans-Atlantic passengers. Costly furniture, expensive rugs, pictures and other furnishings were removed and stored in warehouses. Both vessels were provisioned with hundreds of tons of “bully beef” or tinned meat and other foodstuffs.

It was believed that the designers of the Queen Mary and the Mauretania had copied a trick from the Germans and constructed the vessels with bolted cabin partitions instead of permanently constructed walls. These bolted partitions can be quickly unscrewed, transforming the interiors of the vessels into huge floating dormitories.

The Mauretania mounted two three-inch anti-aircraft guns on the aft end of the promenade deck and a six-inch cannon astern, thus making her a naval vessel subject to unconditional attack in the eyes of the Nazis. The Queen Mary carries no armament and relies mainly upon speed to elude submarines although she may go from here to Halifax to be outfitted with guns against warplanes.

The Queen Mary is too large to pass through the Panama Canal and if she is en route to Australia will be forced to make a round-about voyage around the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn. The Mauretania can make the canal.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

“Is the milk control board a help to the farmer?” was the question discussed at the meeting of Pineville Grange, held Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Scarborough.

Two members who spoke, and who were of the opinion that the board is not of much aid to agriculturists, are Howard Sickel and Clarence H. Smith. The only benefit to the farmer, they claimed, is from the bonding of the dealer.

The master, Joseph Wiggins, had charge of the business meeting, during which several members gave reports of the quarterly meeting of Lower Bucks and Philadelphia Pomona Grange, No. 22, held in Buckingham, several weeks ago.

B. Palmer Tomlinson, lecturer, had charge of the program, which featured discussion of assigned questions. Joseph Parry was asked to answer the question, “How many years ahead should the farmer plan his work?”

The Rev. Meyer M. Hostetter, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Doylestown, and the Rev. George M. Whitehead, former pastor of the same church, officiated Monday at the funeral of Mrs. William J. Leator, Doylestown. Interment was made in Doylestown Cemetery. The pallbearers were Horace E. Gwinner, A. Russell Thomas, Joseph R. Ruos, William J. Kane, Walter E. Bachmann and W. Carlisle Hobensack.

Reynaud Forms Cabinet

Paris, Mar. 21—Paul Reynaud, 62-year-old wizard of international finance, today formed a new French cabinet to succeed the ministry of Edouard Daladier.

Announcement of Premier Reynaud's success in lining up a fresh and workable ministry to speed up France's war against Nazi Germany was made late this afternoon, soon after his arrival at the Elysee Palace, with his cabinet ministers.

The members of the new ministry, which will now carry on the war, were presented to President Lebrun.

Three Small Vessels Damaged

London, Mar. 21—Only three small neutral vessels suffered damages in a German aerial attack on a British convoy in the North Sea, the British Admiralty insisted today.

The Nazi raid on the convoy was carried out in swift reprisal for the terrific British battle on the German air and naval base at Sylt, in which it was stated bombs dropped by the British planes wrought extensive damage.

The British raid on Sylt was carried out to avenge Saturday's German attack upon Scapa Flow, and thus it began to appear as if the war were developing into a retaliatory blow-for-blow conflict.

To Release Dahl

Los Angeles, Mar. 21—Although police declared he passed numerous worthless checks in Los Angeles in 1936, Harold E. Dahl, Spanish Civil War aviator and much publicized captive, will not be returned for prosecution.

Police request for extradition proceedings has been definitely refused today by First Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecher, who said Dahl's extradition would not be worth the cost to the county.

Detectives announced today they will advise New York authorities to release the former Los Angeles airplane worker, who is now under $1,000 bail.

Fear Flood Danger

Parkers Landing, Pa., Mar. 21—Flood waters in the Parkers Landing district subsided slowly during the night, but fears were expressed early today that a new freeze might force the river up again and bring further inundation of lowland areas.

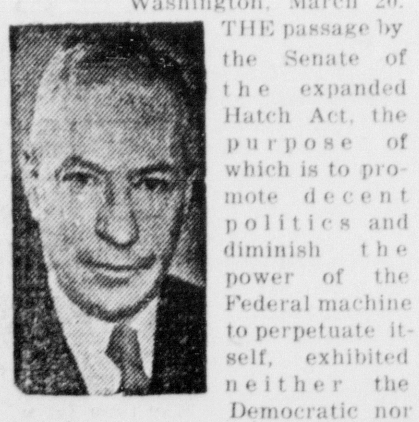

An ice gorge on the Allegheny dammed still water, backed into this little community's business section, flooding River avenue under six inches to three feet of water.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Hatch Act Hypocrisy

Washington, March 20. THE passage by the Senate of the expanded Hatch Act, the purpose of which is to promote decent politics and diminish the power of the Federal machine to perpetuate itself, exhibited neither the Democratic nor the Republican party in a particularly favorable light.

SO FAR as the latter is concerned, perhaps it is unfair to go behind the record and certainly the bill would have been killed but for Republican votes. Nevertheless, there was about the solidity of their support a gloating and hypocritical smugness which sufficiently revealed that their attitude

Want Mine Reopened

Pittsburgh, Mar. 21—The livelihood of 500 miners hung on the outcome as Vinton Colliery Company and mine union officials conferred in Pittsburgh today on possible means of reopening the Vintondale mine, closed on payday last week without warning.

Vintondale residents fear the village of 1750 persons will become closed down if the mine is not reopened and the payroll restored. Some $30,000 in wages and $90,000 in local and county taxes were left unpaid when the mine shut down last Thursday.

HOLY THURSDAY MARKED BY SPECIAL SERVICES

In Many Houses of Worship Christians Will Partake of Communion

SOLEMN OBSERVANCE

Throughout Christendom there is now a solemn observance of Holy Week, which will be climaxed by Easter Sunday, the most joyous day in the Christian calendar.

Holy Thursday and Good Friday are outstanding on the church calendar, and Christians throughout the world mark the days on which the passion and death of the Christ occurred, with His subsequent victory over death and the grave on the third day.

In many a church the strains of such masterpieces as “The Crucifixion” will be heard; the penitent will observe the rite of Holy Communion, and Christians will ponder on the sacrifice of the Lamb of God.

In Bristol, and likewise in surrounding communities, the Holy Week and Easter services have long been planned.

Last evening, Part 1 of “The Crucifixion” was presented in Zion Lutheran Church; while this evening there will be public confession and the Lord's Supper. The Lord's Supper will be marked this evening in Presbyterian Church of Our Saviour, with the minister, the Rev. Andrew G. Solla, officiating. In Bristol Presbyterian Church at eight p. m., the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is also scheduled, with reception of new members.

Mass at 8:30 o'clock this morning in St. Mark's Catholic Church, was followed by procession of the St. Mark's school children to the Altar of Repose, where there will be adoration all day. The Repository is beautifully decorated with silk-satin and real Princess lace. The floral decorations are clusters of lilies with lacy ferns.

In St. Ann's Church tonight at 7:30 the sermon will be on “The Passion of Our Lord,” with blessing with the relic of the true cross.

The Bristol Methodist congregation will partake of Holy Communion tonight at eight o'clock.

Corporate Communion will be the order of service this evening at eight in Grace Episcopal Church, Hulmeville. There will be Holy Communion also in Neshaminy Methodist Church, Hulmeville. The same sacrament will be observed together with devotional address in Cornwells Methodist Church.

Holy Week services in Yardley Methodist Church include Holy Communion this evening at 7:45.

Molotov's Visit To Berlin May Speed Europe's Events

By Pierre J. Huss

BERLIN, Mar. 21—In a move which will speed the pace of Europe's already rushing events, Soviet Premier-For-Commissar V. M. Molotov probably will visit Berlin before Easter, it was anticipated today.

When this long-deferred but frequently predicted visit occurs, Chancellor Hitler for the first time will meet Moscow's “key man” and shake hands with the figure whom Berlin regards as Dictator Josef Stalin's foremost envoy.

WARNS OFFICERS NOT TO BECOME “PINCH-HUNGRY”

Bucks County Detective, Anthony Russo, is Speaker at Police Academy

62 MEN WERE PRESENT

Announce List of Speakers For Remainder of The Season

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 21—The fifth annual session of the Bucks County Police Academy opened Tuesday night with 62 men enrolled in the course. Numerous speakers have been scheduled for the season and talks will be given upon various subjects related to police work.

The speaker at the opening session was Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, of Bristol. Russo gave a very interesting, informative and helpful talk. He dealt with criminal investigation.

“The reputation of an officer in a community is his greatest asset. Do not be ‘pinch-hungry.’ Temper justice with a little common sense. Be an advisor and a friend. Friendship leads to co-operation at the time of a crime,” were Russo's opening remarks.

“There are no set rules which apply to the investigation of crimes. Each crime is a problem in itself. The investigation of crime is not an exact science but a combination of all sciences. In all cases judgment and sound reasoning must be applied.

“Witnesses very often are mistaken in the identification of suspects in a crime. Five eye-witnesses will give five descriptions of the same person. This makes it necessary to follow every lead to its conclusion. When an identification is being made, a suspect must be given every fair chance to prove that he is not guilty. Identification through photographs should be made with the suspect's picture mixed with those of others so that the witness can select the correct one.”

Expects Quintuplets

Miami, Fla., Mar. 21—Blonde, slender Mrs. Emory Callahan, 22, who thinks the ideal family is 12 children, today remained calm and even delighted at the prospect she will give birth to quintuplets in May.

Unless X-ray photographs have been misinterpreted, the young bride of eight months will be delivered of five tiny babies, possibly sooner than May if a Caesarian operation is required, according to a copyrighted story in the Daily News.

Mrs. Callahan, who had not received any special care until after the X-ray was taken, was removed today from the small bungalow home which the Callahans shared with two other families, to Jackson Memorial Hospital. Neither her physician nor her husband would discuss the move.

The bride wore a dress of white tulle, a veil of white net, and carried a colonial bouquet of white flowers. Her sister, Miss Beryl Davis, who served as bridesmaid, was attired in pea green tulle, wore a wreath of flowers in her hair, and also wore a corsage of orchids.

The best man was Howard Hatch, Philadelphia, brother of the groom.

A reception followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Veit, West Bristol, uncle and aunt of the former Miss Davis. Mr. and Mrs. Hatch will reside in an apartment at 2608 N. 11th street, Philadelphia.

IDES OF MARCH

Commentators in Europe and America, discussing the war, have been recalling that the Ides of March have been as significant in modern times as they were to Julius Caesar, with implications that Great Britain and France had better pay more attention to the warnings than did the gentleman who fell at the foot of Pompey's statue with 23 wounds.

It was in March that Hitler made his invasion of the Rhineland and in the same month of the year he dealt a decisive blow in many other quarters.

The Nazi government has certainly been increasingly arrogant in recent weeks, reaching a climax when it seized the opportunity presented by the appearance of Sumner Welles in Berlin to declare that its price for peace is German hegemony over all Europe and the destruction of Britain.

In the past few days there have been reports of increasing activity on the Western front. A number of new divisions that are supposed to have undergone intensive training during the winter have been placed near the French border, and it may be important to note that still other fresh divisions have been lined up along the Swiss frontier.

To keep the enemy in a state of jitters is a part of Nazi strategy, but there may be something in the Ides of March idea. And if British seizure of German coal destined for Italy is not designed to clarify Italy's status in the war at once, why wasn't the blockade applied to this coal sooner? The Allies are taking no chances on being surprised by Mussolini if Hitler really starts on the rampage. They want to know whether his "neutrality" is merely the best way of helping Hitler until an opportune time for lining up with him on the field of battle.

BEER AND SKITTLES

Among other things which are shrouded by the mists of antiquity is the origin of bowling. The game of Skittles, its immediate ancestor, came to England from France in the fourteenth century under the name of Kails. It must have been old in Holland when Peter Stuyvesant sailed to the New World, for it was in the beginning of his government in New Amsterdam that Rip Van Winkle wandered away in the Catskills and came upon a company of odd-looking personages playing at nine pins. The purely American contribution to bowling has been the tenth pin.

In Skittles, associated in the common phrase with beer, the bowler stood but 21 feet from the pins, which were from four to nine in number and arranged in a square with one point toward the bowler, who used a large wooden ball, about a foot in diameter and described by authorities as "not always round," a favored alibi to this day among bowlers off their stride.

Bowling is a hearty game, fitting in admirably with the mood which pervades the male night out. Certainly it is the most amateur of American popular pastimes. Few of its devotees can possibly make a living at it, and the extent of one's enjoyment of it is in no relation whatever to one's proficiency. Bowling is reported to have gained greatly in popularity this winter. It is well that this is so, for no sport or pastime contains so much sport and exercise, an admirable combination.

THE CAIRO GARTER MURDERS

CHAPTER XX

This was dangerous business. It wasn't good sense to go around unguarded. All at once he remembered Stag Melhorne. Stag, he knew, had no more morals than a toment, fewer ethics than a Levantine, but all of a Swiss mercenary's loyalty to his salt. Whatever Stag's connections, if he accepted money for keeping Hugh North safe—Hugh North would be kept safe even if it meant holes in Stag Melhorne's tough carcass.

He was rapping at the soldier of fortune's door a few minutes later. "C'mon in," hailed a sleepy voice, and North entered to find the object of his search, suspenders over hips, shaving before a mirror and heartily cursing the lukewarm water.

"Heyo, Skipper, how's tricks?" "Not bad. Looks like you've just crawled out of the downy."

"Just! Sure had one big blowout last night. Say, you ought to take in the Lighthouse Cabaret." He hesitated. "Say, you never rang me up."

"Couldn't Stag. Too busy. How long do you figure to stay in town?" The razor paused in its descent down Melhorne's powder-marked cheek. "That depends. Why?"

"Oh, I was just wondering. Maybe you'd like a job?" "Melhorne," he replied carelessly, but North guessed he was thinking hard. "It depends. What kind of a job? How much time would it take?"

"Two or three days only—there's five hundred in it."

"Sounds good, Skipper. The dough from my last job is about gone and my next—er—hitch isn't on hand yet. I need some dough to spend on my Big Moment. And, boy, oh boy, is she pretty swell!" Warming to his enthusiasm, Melhorne talked even when sousing his face in hot water.

"Where did you meet this charming lady, Stag?"

"When I was down here last spring, then again about two months ago in Berlin. I was up there covering the annual maneuvers for old General von Schlee. He's Bolivia's chief of staff and really bosses the country. Well, as I was saying, this beautiful doll is at some embassy bun fight last spring and straight away we looks at each other. I feel like I was sixteen again. She kind of goes for me, too, and we start playing around together. Little by little she tells me all about herself."

"Yes," North expressed polite interest.

"Seems like her folks all got bumped off during the Black-and-Tan trouble. She was only a kid of thirteen or fourteen then and they shipped her out to Turkey where her uncle brought her up. Since he died she's been kicking round on her own. You ought to see her." Melhorne broke off, brushing his stiff sandy hair with furious energy. "Say, Skipper, there's a snap of her on my dresser. Go in and treat your eyes."

"I sure will," North chuckled. "Any girl who can get a hard hombre like you, Stag, climbing trees—"

The words stuck, for there, smiling impishly out of a thin gold frame, were the piquant features of Moira McLeod!

"She's a pip, isn't she?" grinned Melhorne, wiping soap from the lobe of his mangled ear. "How she can go for me I can't understand, but well—I guess I rate aces up with her."

North said nothing, being far too occupied in a vain attempt to correlate Chief Inspector Clive's remarks with the distinctly dramatic scene at Hasid Pasha's party, and now with this most recent development.

"Say, Skipper, what are you really doing here?" Melhorne asked. "Was that on the level about your retiring?"

"Sure, Stag, as you pointed out in Hongkong not so long ago, I'm not growing any younger. I suddenly realized that where my bank account ought to be, there's only a lot of free air. Met a fellow on the boat—he got taken very sick—couldn't come ashore."

"Yeh," Melhorne was now all carefully subdued interest and only mechanically offered his guest a glass.

"Well, he asked me to do some business for him."

"Who was this guy?" Melhorne, pouring out a drink, was naive to a degree. Underneath he was tense though, North could see it with half an eye.

"Fellow named Follonsbee."

Melhorne did not bother to simulate surprise. "Yeh, I met him, too. Funny, isn't it? He said something about doing business together, but before I could get him he got—er—taken sick. Didn't see him during the last two days. What are you up to? Private detective business, or something?"

"Maybe—maybe not. Well, Stag, will you be my bodyguard for a few days? Tonight, anyhow?"

"Sure, why not?" swiftly agreed the thick-bodied fellow. "We can see how it works."

"All right, Stag. Your job's to keep my hide in one piece and your mouth shut."

"Okay, Skipper. Always said we ought to be partners."

The phone rang saying that a Señor Benevides was waiting so, returning to his hired office, the man from G-2 went through a scene almost identical with that of Davidov. Strange to say, Señor Benevides also was extremely insistent upon having his very sizable order filled within four days; so was a charming Turkish gentleman known as Djemal Bey. Noon found Captain North rather astonished and amused at his unique success as a salesman. During a single morning he had accepted orders amounting to close on a million dollars!

Realization that it was half-past twelve came as an unpleasant shock. If he hoped to reach the Café Khâmouh with a reasonable margin of time he must leave at once.

"I am Captain North; I phoned for a table," he told the maître d'hôtel.

"Perfectly, Monsieur le Capitaine, it is on the side as you ordered."

"And the flowers?" "The roses are exquisite." The headwaiter smirked. "The lady is waiting."

North smiled while surrendering his panama to the vestiaire. Feminine Natika Black, it appeared, was possessed of one distinctly unfeminine virtue. She was punctual, even ten minutes ahead of time.

"Voilà, monsieur. The table is satisfactory, one hopes?"

"It will do very well." North nodded then penetrated a tactfully arranged screen of plants.

"Good morning to you, Captain," a gay voice called. "I thought you'd never get here."

If Hugh North was astonished to find Moira McLeod at his table he gave no indication of it. "I'd have got here much earlier if I'd known you were waiting, my fair colleen. What a perfectly splendid coincidence!"

"Yes, isn't it?" Moira smiled a veiled smile. "You're a cool one, aren't you? Never a start or a stammer and I was wondering whether you'd be falling all over yourself like Mother O'Connor's boy when the shoot got between his legs."

He grinned hugely and her color rose in response.

"What will you be having to cool your throat? A frappé of some sort?"

bob free of her shoulders. "Oh, save those fuddy-duddies for your fancy French and Greek ladies. I'll have a highball—a wee drop of Irish dear Captain."

With increasing fascination North studied his self-invited companion as, dimple showing, she sipped from her small glass.

"Well, a low death to Cromwell!" She smiled.

"And now, Moira McLeod, just what is the idea of all this?"

She smiled provocatively. "A friend of mine told me last night you were going to stay a while in Cairo. He thinks very highly of you."

"Respects rather than loves me, eh?" Inwardly North was amused. How like Stag Melhorne to make no mention of having spoken to Moira.

"No, he really admires you, Captain. He—er—seems to think that your experience could be usefully employed here in Cairo. Tell me, have you really left the American service?"

"Um!" She gazed at him fixedly then raised one slender brow to an interrogative angle. "Is it true you're handling Heinemann and Schlager's account?"

He looked quickly about, then spoke sharply, almost angrily. "Haven't you better sense than to talk such nonsense in a place like this? There are a dozen people in earshot."

She chuckled. "I did that on purpose, Captain. Well, I shouldn't wonder but I'd better tell you what I'm driving at."

By an effort he subordinated an overwhelming curiosity and merely shrugged. "Perhaps, but not if you don't want to. I'm entirely satisfied to find a fascinating and uninvited young woman at my table. Especially when I last saw her laying for her host with a gun. It makes one think."

"Yes, doesn't it?" the young woman in white returned coolly. "Well, that doesn't alter the fact that Stag tells me you get bored easily. You—well—you thrive on uncertainty?"

"Stag usually hits the mark, Miss McLeod."

The set of her red lips softened and she dropped her eyes, spoke softly. "He's rough, Captain, and he's no beauty, but he's loyal and he's all man."

Tactfully North glanced at a plain gold watch strapped to his wiry brown wrist. "What do you want me to do?"

"I have a job to do, a big and dangerous job," she murmured, "and I want you to help me. It will pay pretty well—big money, in fact." Her look flashed up. "But you'll have to forget all about those orders you took for Heinemann and Schlager this morning—they're not safe."

She held up a hand, anticipating his query. "Oh, I know all about it—heard every word you said. It's no use to ask any questions. Will you meet Stag and me at the Restaurant des Pyramides at nine?"

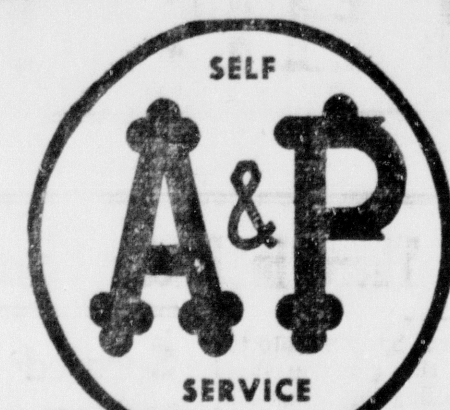

"That, unfortunately, will be impossible, mademoiselle," interrupted a low, almost husky voice, and Hugh North sensed an intangible tension enter the atmosphere. Rounding the screen of potted plants stepped Natika Black, on her lips a smile which was not reflected in her eyes. "Captain North is engaged this evening. She hesitated as North sprang up, smiled sweetly. "Have I perhaps mistaken the time?"

"Of course not, Miss Black. Bumped into Miss McLeod here and I persuaded her to take time for a quick cocktail."

North, performing the introduction, could not but admire Moira's brazen self-assurance. That the two women entertained a hearty dislike of each other he felt certain, but whether they had met before he was not so sure.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

Fresh laurels were heaped on the heads of Fredric March and Charles Laughton at the Bristol Theatre yesterday as co-stars of Darryl Zanuck's stirring production of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables."

A truly great picture, handsomely mounted and flawlessly directed by Richard Boleslawski, this latest 20th Century production follows the eventful life of Jean Valjean, who suffered five years of torture in the gaols of a French prison ship for stealing a loaf of bread.

RITZ THEATRE

Ann Sothern plays her latest characterization, that of Damon Runyon's famous Ethel Turp, in "Joe and Ethel"

Turp Call On the President," now showing at the Ritz Theatre. Her first since her unusual declaration was "Maisie" and her second was that of Garda Sloane, the sorely tried wife of Joel Sloane, amateur detective, in "Fast and Furious."

"Rulers of the Sea" is also showing at the Ritz.

GRAND THEATRE

Such ingredients as excitement, love and adventure are said to be combined in the production of "Green Hell," initial Famous Productions film for Universal release, which comes to the Grand Theatre today.

With Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Bennett heading an outstanding cast of 11 principals, "Green Hell" is declared to capture a realism seldom brought to the screen in films of this type.

During assembly period of Buckingham high school, letters were awarded to members of the girls' and boys' athletic teams of the school.

Home room and service awards were made at the same time. Pupils who rated highest in the ice skating carnival held on the Neshaminy creek some weeks ago received their awards.

The service awards were given by the home room teachers, the athletic awards by the coaches, Horace Luft and Miss Matrona Walck, and Supervising Principal R. Chapman Carver, and Miriam Edmundson presented the awards for the ice carnival.

County Superintendent J. H. Hoffman, Doylestown, was a guest, and he spoke briefly of the relation of sportsmanship to education. He commented upon the need of making sportsmanship a worthwhile part of the school life.

More than 100 members of the Eastern Pennsylvania Butter and Egg Distributors' Association attended the annual meeting in the community hall at Blooming Glen on Monday evening. The ladies' auxiliary served a roast pork and sauerkraut supper.

During the business session, Crosby Sellick, Doylestown, was named president; Roscoe Moyer was re-elected secretary; and K. R. Shetler, the treasurer.

An interesting illustrated talk was given by Frank B. Arnold, a representative of the United Secret Service. His subject was "Know Your Money." Mr. Arnold also related many personal experiences during his 18 years in the service. He aided in the protection of three presidents, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt, and more recently aided in running down the arsenic ring in Philadelphia.

The latter part of the evening was devoted to a display of magic.

ness is not led to make a false identification; likewise in a standup or personal identification.

"Crime investigation is a combination of hard work, consistency of application, information from friends, and a certain amount of luck and playing hunches. A crime is like a picture torn in many pieces. These pieces must be reassembled until complete and then presented to a jury as a whole picture.

"Bucks County has a minimum of crime. There are no organized rackets preying on children, gangs never go very long before they are caught."

The speaker cited many cases on which he has worked in Bucks County to illustrate the various steps in crime investigation.

Mr. Russo explained the methods of obtaining a death-bed statement, and used as an illustration the statement obtained in the Tilotta case at Bristol.

Continuing, Detective Russo spoke in high praise of the co-operation given by the Philadelphia police department. He credited them with assistance in solving a great percentage of the major crimes in Bucks County. He cited examples of the many cases in which they had unselfishly helped the Bucks County authorities.

"Bucks County is fortunate in having intelligent officers of the Penna. Motor Police in this county," said Russo. He gave them credit for having greatly helped in his training as a police officer.

Sergeant William Engle of Doylestown Motor Police will be the instructor tonight, his subject being "Motor Laws."

The following speakers have been listed:

March 26, Carl Pottenger, firearms and safety.

March 28, Lt. James A. Kelly, Philadelphia Police Department, homicide investigation.

April 2, Ira Mills, penal correction of criminals.

April 4, Major T. F. Martin, P. M. P., general police instruction.

April 9, Earl D. Blair, fingerprint identification.

April 11, Chief H. B. Welsh, Quakertown, searching methods.

Prosecute Us and We'll Tell All, Warn Communists

Dozenberg, it is alleged, was head of the Soviet Military Intelligence in the United States whose "specialty" was contacting the various government departments in Washington.

The Dies committee, soon to resume its investigation of subversive activities, wants to get Dozenberg on the witness stand, but it is doubtful whether it will succeed.

In fact, a sharp struggle is now in progress between the Dies Committee and Federal officials over the question of making public all the facts the United States Secret Service has gathered on Dozenberg. There is even discussion within the committee itself on this point.

The big question at issue is this: "Will the Secret Service files on Dozenberg be made available to the Dies Committee and opened to the public?"

Insiders doubt that they will. But if they do, they declare, sensational revelations will crash newspaper front pages.

Dozenberg now is being held incommunicado by Federal officials in New York City, awaiting sentence for passport frauds. He is a founder of the Communist party in this country and is characterized as "the No. 2 Communist in the United States."

(The No. 1 Communist is Earl Brow-der, general secretary of the Communist party, who on January 22 last was sentenced to serve four years in a Federal penitentiary and fined $2,000 after he was convicted by a jury of using an American passport fraudulently obtained.)

Dozenberg, prior to his arrest on the passport frauds charge, had been living quietly in Washington as a business man. It is claimed that he had many contacts with various departments in the Federal Government.

The New York Journal and American recently revealed that Mrs. Frances Dallant, wife of Dozenberg by a second marriage, was a confidential stenographer from 1933 to 1935 in the office of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and now is employed by the Social Security Board in Washington. She has held numerous other government positions. She is an American citizen.

The Secret Service, according to International News Service's informant, has been investigating the Dozenbergs for some time and has found that Dozenberg was getting military secrets and general information of value to the Soviet Government.

That is the file Dies Committee members believe should be made public.

Certain members of the Dies Committee take the position that Dozenberg will be getting off with a "light rap" when he is sentenced in the passport fraud case.

Dozenberg, due to appear for sentence today on his plea of guilty, faces a fine of $4,000 and a 10-year prison term.

It is charged by a person in close touch with the situation that Dozenberg threatened that if he were prosecuted for a major offense, he would "spill the beans" and expose government officials with whom he has been in contact.

"He could expose how the Soviet Embassy entertained highly-placed officials, as well as Congressmen and Senators," said this informant. "He could tell just whom he contacted in the Federal Government and under what circumstances."

"Dozenberg, however, has given them a warning. He told them: 'You indict me—and I'll tell the full story. You'll have to indict others besides me and they won't all be our people.'"

Pearl Buck Tells Of Resistance By Chinese

being, although it has undergone changes of government, since the earliest dawn of history.

"For more than 4000 years China has gone on being a democracy and was very strong and democratic at the dawn of history."

Mrs. Buck, who probably knows more about China than any other living white woman, asserted that she has noticed that when a nation becomes imperialistic it swells out and bursts.

China is undergoing an attack from one of the strongest Fascistic nations in the world today—a nation whose fascism has gone beyond the political to the spiritual stage.

Regarding care of the needy, the speaker said:

"In China the State has never taken any care of the poor; there was never such a thing as an institution for the blind until the Christian missionaries started them. Whenever a person was in need in China he returned to his own family. A lazy man can better be taken care of by a rebellious family than by anyone else."

Mrs. Buck, who said the Chinese trust in human nature because they are past masters in it, will put up with a certain amount of graft among rulers.

Of war lords she had this to say: "War lords are most difficult for Americans to understand, and yet they shouldn't be." She explained how the war lords kept China in civil war until the strongest became the Emperor.

"We have never had a big revolution in China, and, doubtless, never will have," said Mrs. Buck, who added that the present confusion is due to the revolution which happened in 1911.

Listing Chiang Kai-shek as a war lord, who is believed by many to be a half-magical man, Mrs. Buck said the war lords always rose out of the masses. "They are never highbrows or intellectuals, but some times pretend to be."

Mrs. Buck, who said the Chinese were aware of the Japanese invasion long before it came, particularly the educators, told how co-operative industries and schools, even universities, were prepared in the interior of China. "Educators saw it coming and are making and keeping themselves as strong as they can. They are determined to live and relegate war to a piece of folly."

A DOLLAR-A-DAY BUYS THIS

THIS is one of a pair of small homes newly designed this spring by engineers working for National Small Homes Demonstration—a group of building material manufacturers.

The house is intended to illustrate the kind of structure which offers most house for the money in the price class which permits monthly payments amounting to about $1.00 per day. The house may be built with or without basement and has sufficient second-floor area for the finishing of two bedrooms in addition to the two already available on the first floor. Plans for the house are available at $1.00 each from National Small Homes Demonstration, 1337 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C.

EXERCISE CARE IN THE PURCHASING OF SHIRTS FOR MENFOLK

By Miss Edna Stephany (Home Economics Representative)

Men's shirts are sold according to neck size and sleeve length. Neck bands range from size 13 1/2 to 18 or 20. Sleeves usually come in three lengths: 33, 34, and 35 inches. If the shirt is marked "sanforized" or "fully shrunk," the shopper should expect only minimum shrinkage, if any. If not so labeled, and if a guarantee of no further shrinking is not assumed by the store, then it is wiser to buy shirts with longer sleeves to allow for shrinkage. Neck bands are usually preshrunk, but are not foolproof in this respect, unless clearly labeled. Shirt tails that become too short because of shrinkage are both uncomfortable and annoying to the wearer. The only sure guard against this catastrophe is to buy shirts absolutely guaranteed not to shrink out of fit.

Good quality shirts have fairly square-cut tails. The founded shirt tails are used when the manufacturer conserved on material. Collars and cuffs on good shirts do not shrink or pull out of shape. Double cuffed shirts are more durable but harder to press than those with the single cuffs. Likewise the neckband shirt is easier to iron than the collar-attached shirt.

"Trubenzed," "anti-wilt," and "fused" collars have a permanent finish. They do not crush, wrinkle, or buckle under when worn. A viscose solution of cellulose is fused into the woven material, or a layer of cellulose is fused between two layers of the woven fabric to make an unstarched collar look starched and yet not make it stiff. Many men claim that these collars wear out more quickly than those without a permanent finish. However, there is one shirt on the market at the present time which carries a guarantee that the permanent finish collar will last the lifetime of the shirt.

Yokes in good quality shirts are self-lined, but cheap, poorly made shirts often have a yoke of single thickness.

Better shirts have a reinforced panel for buttonholes. Seven good quality pearl buttons of the four-hole variety sewed on with seven loops of thread are considered standard, but the number of buttons may vary from five to eight. Poor quality shirts often have only four or five buttons sewed on insecurely.

At the bottom of the side seams in better shirts are generous anchored gussets which prevent splitting and ripping.

Felled and double or triple seams are strongest. Double thread is used in stitching the better shirts and at least 24 stitches to the inch should be found at any place where there is stitching. Some poorly made shirts have as few as 12 stitches to the inch. Poor shirts often have pieced sleeves and fullness bunched at the cuff seam-line.

SAVORY STEW

There's a certain something about a good homemade stew. The kind where the meat juices seep into the heart of the potatoes and the carrots get all full of the flavor of marrow. I tell you, ambrosia seems like pretty slim pickings to a man who's been brought up on real honest stew. There's a wholesome, heartening quality to a dish like that. Or, if you fancy a little extra heat and savor in your stews, may be you'd like to thicken the broth with a full-flavored cream soup—cream of mushroom soup with its satin smooth sauce and rich, almost gamy flavor of fresh mushrooms. Here now, is a stew of that sort made of tender little nubbins of veal cooked with potatoes and onions in a subtly seasoned cream of mushroom sauce. You're sure to like it served so:

FRENCH STEW

Cut into 1-inch pieces—

2 1/2 lbs. veal (inexpensive cut).
Stew, stirring often for 5 minutes, in—

2 tablespoons butter. Do not expect veal to brown.

Add—

2 cups hot water
1 large onion, finely diced
2 cups raw diced potatoes
5-6 baby carrots, left whole
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon paprika.

Cover and cook over low heat or bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) 1 hour or until meat is quite tender.

Blend, then add to meat—

4 tablespoons flour
small (10 oz.) can cream of mushroom soup.

Continue cooking on top of stove, stirring constantly, 4 to 5 minutes.

BAKED BEANS, NEW STYLE

About this time of the year the folks back home used to say, "Well, be back of the winter's about 'roven now'". Our food supply was 'oo, though, and spring was still a long way off. In those days our food went by seasons a whole lot more than it does now, and toward the end of the winter fresh vegetables and meat were pretty scarce. But I think we could count on having a big pot of beans once a week. Good old-fashioned beans baked in the oven 'til they were tender and meaty and rich with the flavor of sugar and molasses and a fat chunk of salt pork. That was one of our favorite suppers then and it still is. But nowadays, when we want a little variety we just add a few ingredients from the pantry shelf—a bit of left-over pork to a can of oven-baked beans. You'd like it, too, served so:

BOSTON BEANS WITH BARBECUE SAUCE

Combine and heat thoroughly—

1 medium (18 oz.) can oven-baked beans, Boston style
3/4 cup finely-chopped cooked pork.

Mix together, then heat—

1/2 cup tomato ketchup
tablespoon India relish.
teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
2 1/4 Pour sauce over beans and serve.

LIFE SAVER FOR LENT

If this business of planning meals for Lent is wearing you down, here's an idea for a main course supper dish that you'll welcome with open arms. It's one of those big, hearty casserole dishes that makes practically a main course in itself—macaroni, chili sauce and shrimp. First off, you'll want a 17-ounce tin of delicious cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese. Spoon it out of the tin, combining with the shrimp and chili sauce as suggested here:

MACARONI, CHILI SAUCE AND SHRIMP

Clean—

1 5 1/2-oz. can shrimp then flake 1/2 of them.

Arrange half—

1 medium (17 oz.) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese in bottom of shallow casserole.

Spread with—

Chili sauce, using about 3 tablespoons. Sprinkle flaked shrimp lightly over chili sauce. Repeat layers of macaroni and chili sauce.

Arrange the remaining whole shrimps on top, then sprinkle with—

Soft bread crumbs.

Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 20 minutes.

The Great Game of Politics

poorly, cowardice and conviction. That the President gave the bill merely lip-service support was attested by the fact that so many rubber-stamp Senators, whom he could easily have influenced—such as Guffey, Pepper, Smathers and Schwelbach—vehemently fought the bill. On the final vote a majority of the Democrats voted for the bill, but that was the only vote on which there was a majority.

ON the really vital votes—the votes for recommitment and emasculating amendments—less than a majority of Democrats stood by the bill, and there were some conspicuous absentees. Those were the tests on which the bill was saved by seven and, in one case, four votes. Days before the final vote the passage of the bill had been conceded. It had gotten over the last hurdle and could not be stopped. Then it was that various hold Democratic Senators who had dodged every test ballot appeared and voted for the bill, thus making a favorable record, whereas their calculated absence on the test votes had aided the bill's foes.

It was the same old game that the trimmers always play. They evade or avoid voting when their votes might be decisive, but rush to be recorded after the victory has been won and there is no danger. It was the same game played in the Supreme Court fight of 1937, when quite a few Democratic Senators refrained from taking a stand against the President's bill until after its defeat was assured. Then they courageously came out against it. The truth about this Hatch bill is that a majority of the Democrats in Congress do not want it because this is an election year, most of them are up for renomination and the Federal machine, whose activity would be curtailed by this law, is their machine. There are some among them honestly opposed to the bill on State rights grounds, but the bulk of the opposition was politically inspired—and no one disputes it.

It will be the same way in the House. That the bill will get through that body is at least doubtful. As in the Senate, the Republicans will piously line up behind it, but a majority of the Democrats will try either to kill it outright or render it impotent by amendments. A good many will be held in line by the weight of public sentiment and newspaper support—and some will be for it as a matter of conviction. In all probability the vote will be close. Opponents of the bill are aided by the general feeling among Democrats that its defeat would not grieve the President and that voting against the bill will not be held against anyone at the White House.

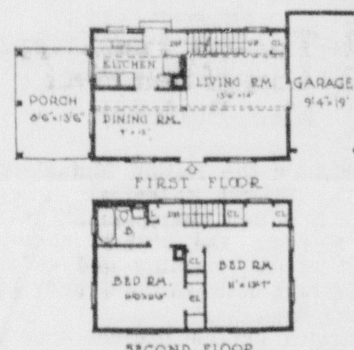

IN other words, it distinctly is not an Administration measure. A factor in the ultimate fate of the bill also will be the feeling that the Attorney General, Mr. Jackson, a very partisan person, will not be overzealous in enforcing this law in the coming campaign—particularly if, as he hopes, he himself is on the Democratic ticket. In fact, one cynical member a few days ago asserted that this law, if enacted, would be violated with the same impunity as the late lamented Volstead Act of the prohibition period.

FOR THE GROWING INCOME

HERE is a good, balanced house... garage on one side... porch on the other. Thousands of houses are built in this general style every year for the obvious reasons of: lowest cost, greatest convenience, and best appearance for the money.

The plan has great flexibility and provides two bedrooms and a bath on the second floor. If you have a sixty foot lot, and place your main house directly in the center, you can add the garage one year and the porch the next.

Metropolitan Opera's "Kangaroo Kid" Slated for Tops in Wagnerian Roles

Marjorie Lawrence, soon to become the leading Wagnerian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, once rode as a sheep herder on an Australian ranch and amused herself with such sports as boxing with kangaroos.

The youthful singer from the Antipodes has been alternating roles with Kirsten Flagstad in New York opera for the past five years. Upon retirement of the Scandinavian soprano at close of the current season Miss Lawrence will probably inherit the mantle of the greatest Bruennhilde of the decade.

Miss Lawrence came to the Metropolitan direct from the Paris Grand Opera, where her debut was compared favorably with those of Chaliapin and Caruso. She soon created an unforgettable impression on American opera lovers with her realistic acting as Bruennhilde in the closing Ring performance, "Twilight of the Gods." Instead of meekly leading the horse to Siegfried's funeral pyre, as former prima donnas had done, Miss Lawrence thrilled her audience by mounting the horse and dashing into the flames, following Wagner's own stage instructions.

Dowagers in the swanky Diamond Horseshoe gasped, but Miss Lawrence performed the daring feat as a matter of course. Born of pioneer stock on an Australian sheep ranch, she almost literally jumped from the cradle to the saddle. Joining her brothers in rounding up sheep on their father's vast ranch, she became expert at "breaking" wild horses to the saddle.

Marjorie's girlhood playthings were boomerangs rather than dolls, and her playmates were such oddities as the kangaroo, the cockatoo, the koala and the laughing bird. Her childhood ambition was to be a jockey and it would have surprised no one, least of all her family, had she made her American debut as a rider instead of a singer.

Though Miss Lawrence started singing at the age of five, she didn't take music seriously until she was eighteen. After only three years of study she was given, at the Paris Opera, roles which traditionally had been reserved for experienced performers only.

Today, one of the Met's most youthful and versatile stars, green-eyed, copper-haired Miss Lawrence contrasts vividly with most of her singing sisters. Other vocalists were shocked to find she eats a hearty steak dinner an hour before curtain time, yet she is the most streamlined performer in the Wagnerian cast.

TO CROWN CHAMPION OF COURT LEAGUE HERE TONIGHT

Bristol Basketball League To Pick Winner of The
1939 Season

GRUNDY VS. PROFY

Wool-Twisters Handicapped
By Loss of Star Pivot
Man, Buckman

Tonight on the Italian Mutual Aid floor, the Bristol Basketball League will crown a new championship team. John & Haas, the 1938-39 champs, are out of the running and so the title now lays between the Grundy and the Profy fives.

The series at the present time is deadlocked at one each and the deciding game should be of interest to all basketball fans of this vicinity. Grundy's won the first game of the series, 51-42, while the Profy's came back and took the second, 41-37. Manager George Hermann, of the woolen twisters, is feeling the loss of his star pivot man, Bucky Buckman, and in the last game tried several players at the post. He used Jesse Vanzant here at the start but this seemed to weaken one of the guard posts and so that did not work satisfactorily.

If Johnny Burke puts in an appearance tonight, it is almost certain that Hermann will start him at the center post with the forwards being Rods Gallagher and Johnny Zack. Guards then will be Vanzant and Nowinski.

By virtue of his close guarding of Gallagher, Monday night, Gusti Carnvale will be at the defensive place again tonight along with Buck Profy. Manager Pieo will start Slaven and Dorsey as forwards and Hughes at center.

In order to win the crown, the Grundymen must stop Slaven and Dorsey. These two are carrying the bulk of the Profy scoring attack on their shoulders and a good defense on these two players will do much towards a Grundy win.

In the preliminary game, the Bristol Scholastics will play the Third Ward A. C. who won the crown in the Bristol Suburban Amateur League. The Scholastics have been victorious in both preliminary games in which they were participants.

First game will begin at eight o'clock sharp.

LANGHORNE GUN CLUB JOINS THE COUNTY ASS'N

LANGHORNE, Mar. 21.—The Langhorne Rod and Gun Club, recently formed, has affiliated with the Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs of Bucks County.

A representative of the county group, Charles A. Rowe, and also Warren A. Frez, district supervisor of Farm Game Project, attended a session of the local group, last week, at the home of William A. Rossiter, Jr.

A committee to draft by-laws and draw up a charter was appointed by President Lamor Brick. The committee includes Lawrence Monroe, chairman; Samuel Gray, Eugene Sergeant, William A. Rossiter, Jr., and Harry Federick.

Eugene Sergeant reported on a prospective site for a clubhouse. The site, located just outside the borough limits on the Foasterville Road, includes several acres of ground suitable for the club's use. The club plans to lease this property and stock it with game and keep it posted.

A board of trustees was elected as follows: William A. Rossiter, Jr., Lawrence Monroe, Eugene Sergeant, Harry Federick and Joseph Stradling.

Other committees appointed at the meeting were: Game committee—John VanSant, chairman; Horace Cooper, Joseph Boyd, Edward Pickering, Joseph Stradling, William Harding and Francis Raiser. Fish committee—Fred Specht, chairman; Leon Wells, Larry McCloy, Charles Markley and Joseph Ridge. Trap committee—Lewis Balgo, chairman; George Allison, Woerner Davenport, William Darrak, and Carl Cortis, Jr. Rifle and Pistol—Harry Federick, chairman; Howard Cortis, and Albert Winterer. Membership committee—Eugene Sergeant, Carl Cortis, Jr., Paul Vansant. Delegates to the county committee—John VanSant, Fred Specht and Eugene Sergeant; alternates, Lawrence Monroe, H. LeRoy Reed, and T. Lamor Rick.
